

SPORTS

Former Miami Marlins baseball player dies in Venezuela due to lack of medicines

BY JORGE EBRO
jebro@elnuevoherald.com

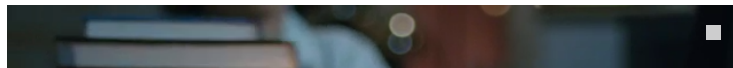

January 25, 2018 11:36 AM
Updated 3 hours 6 minutes

Minimum stay with the Marlins and short step through life. Marcos Carvajal, who wore the uniform of the fish in the Major Leagues, died Wednesday in Ciudad Bolivar due to pneumonia that was not attended to in time due to lack of medication, one of the scourges of Venezuelan society.

According to press reports from that nation, Carvajal could not receive the medicines to treat pneumonia that had been afflicting him in recent days and his body could not withstand the disease. When he died, he was 34 years old.

Carvajal debuted in the majors in the 2005 season with the Colorado Rockies for which he worked 53 episodes with a 5.09 ERA; his period with the Marlins was lower when he worked only four innings in 2007 with an average of 6.75 earned runs.

ADVERTISING

In Venezuela, Carvajal is remembered for his change to the Caracas Lions from the Cardinals of Lara along with Jesus "Chucho" Guzman, one of the most important players of recent times.

Noticias de Ultima Hora

(Esporádicamente) Entérese primero de las noticias de última hora más relevantes.

Ingrese un correo electrónico

SUSCRÍBASE

During his career in the winter league of his land, Carvajal launched for the Caribs of Anzoátegui, Caracas, Lara and the Águilas del Zulia.

After his retirement from baseball, the right-hander was working in his native Ciudad Bolivar with his family.

 COMMENTS ▼

SPONSORED CONTENT

Homeowners Born Before 1985 Are Getting a Huge Reward

If you own a home, you should read this. Thousands of homeowners did this yesterday, and banks are furious! Do this now before it's ...

By MorningFinance

