

Gannett Foundation aids area groups

The Yonkers Hudson River Museum and Cluster Inc., a program that helps Yonkers students with learning disabilities, have been awarded grants by the Frank E. Gannett Newspaper Foundation.

The grants were among 52 totaling $258,055 awarded in 19 communities with Gannett newspapers.

The Gannett Foundation was established by the late founder of the Gannett Group of Newspapers but is independent of Gannett Co., Inc. It contributes locally to civic, charitable, cultural, educational and health causes in communities served by the 78 Gannett daily newspapers and nationally to journalism education and professionalism. Grants Authorized to date this year by the Gannett Foundation total $1,635,029.

These new local grants, all in cash, were announced for communities served by the Westchester Rockland Newspapers:

—CLUSTER, Inc., $5,000 to help buy a van for the LIFT Program of a Yonkers-based organization helping children with learning disabilities.

—Council for the Arts in Westchester: $15,000 for an Arts Fund distributed to cultural organizations throughout the county.

—Day Care and Child Development Council of Rockland County: $6,000 for the Spring Valley-based council to help support operations of four Rockland County day care centers.

—Hudson River Museum: $1,000 capital-endowment support for the Yonkers museum.

—B'Nai B'rith: $3,500 to be shared equally with Children's Adoption Services of Westchester and the Iona College Development Fund to assist a new women's professional golf tournament in May, with proceeds benefiting the same agencies.

—Graham-Windham: $3,000 to help a New York City-based organization replace 75-year-old cottages at a Hastings-on-Hudson facility serving neglected, abandoned or abused children.

He is survived by his wife, the former Catherine Ricciardi; on daughter, Annette of Manhattan; two sons, Angelo of Yonkers and Chris of Hastings-on-Hudson, and three grandchildren.

Prosecution begins bomb case testimony

By PHIL WAGA
Staff Writer

In its opening salvo against two Jewish militants accused of terrorist firebombings, the prosecution produced witnesses Tuesday who placed the defendants near the scene of one incident and revealed discrepancies in their past statements.

Nearly a dozen prosecution witnesses testified Tuesday in the federal trial of Victor Vancier, 32, and Bruce Berger, 30, at the U.S. District Court in lower Manhattan.

The two New York City residents and former Jewish Defense League members are accused of committing, attempting or planning four firebombings of Ethiopian and Egyptian property in Westchester and New York City. They are also suspect in nearly another 10 firebombings in the county and city.

New Rochelle Police Sgt. Dennis Padrucco testified Tuesday that he stopped a car with Vancier and Berger in it about a mile away from the New Rochelle home of an Ethiopian United Nations official whose home had been set afire a few moments earlier on Oct. 25. Padrucco said he asked the suspects what they were doing in the area and they replied they had just dropped off two young women. But Padrucco said they could not give names or address.

Vancier and Berger are accused of setting fire to the New Rochelle home because they allegedly thought the occupant was an Egyptian.

Padrucco also testified that he asked Vancier and Berger if they belonged to any Jewish organizations and they said they did not. Vancier founded and is executive director of the New Jewish Defense League and Berger is second-in-command.

John also matched the license plate of the car he said he saw with the one Stefanidis said he rented to Berger.

The trial continues today.

Olins takes photographs of his customers and a photo of Berger was produced. Also testifying Tuesday was William John, a New York City police officer who said he was assigned to watch Vancier's Utopia Parkway home in Queens last Dec. 12. He said he saw two men who looked like Vancier and Berger ride up to the house about 5:30 a.m. on Dec. 12, about 90 minutes after the attempt on the Egyptian's Brooklyn home. At about 6 a.m. the figure which looked like Berger left Vancier's house, John said.

John also matched the license plate of the car he said he saw with the one Stefanidis said he rented to Berger.

The trial continues today.

Kimon Stefanidis, a supervisor at Olins, said he rented a car to Berger and a friend on Dec. 10, about a day and a half before Berger and Vancier, allegedly attempted to set fire to the Brooklyn home of an Egyptian United Nations official.
