

Gemini Junior High P.E. Teacher Dies At 45

By TOM ROBB Journal & Topics Reporter | Posted: Wednesday, June 10, 2015 1:02 pm

A Gemini Junior High physical education teacher, former professional baseball player, Loyola Academy hall of famer and Notre Dame College Prep baseball coach died suddenly last week at the age of 45.

David Geeve was a Gemini kinetic wellness teacher (physical education) teacher for the last 15 years.

“It is with great sadness that we inform the District 63 community of the passing of Gemini Junior High teacher David Geeve on (Thursday) June 4. Our thoughts are with his family and friends,” a statement on East Maine School Dist. 63’s website read. “A crisis support team was on-site at Gemini on Friday, and we will continue to support families, students, and staff next week.”

Funeral services were private and more information was not released.

A bio page on the district’s website says Geeve was also a graduate of Nelson School in Niles and Gemini. He was also inducted into the Loyola Academy Athletic Hall of Fame in 2010.

Geeve played major league baseball for the Texas Rangers from 1991 to 1996 and later coached baseball at both Notre Dame College Prep in Niles and Rolling Meadows High School, according to Dist. 63.