

Daniel A. Ferber Ph.D.

January 24, 1927 - June 7, 2015

Daniel Arthur Ferber of Apple Valley, MN died on Sunday, June 7, at the age of 88.

Born and raised in Fort Wayne, Indiana, he received a B.A. degree from Wabash College, in Crawfordsville, Indiana, and then spent three seasons as a starting pitcher in the New York Yankee minor league system before pursuing M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at Indiana University, Bloomington.

His 25-year career in higher education administration included senior administrative posts at several colleges and universities, culminating as Vice President for Academic Affairs at Gustavus Adolphus College. He subsequently authored legislation for the Lifelong Learning initiative in Minnesota, which was then taken to Washington, D.C., and adopted at the national level; he established and received legislative support for the Minnesota State Board of Invention; and he was developing the Minventia Project as the national model for a global invention support system.

Dr. Ferber is survived by his wife of 65 years, Dorothy Anne, (née Reasoner); his son, Dan; and his grandson, Christopher.

He was preceded in death by his son, Matthew; and his grandson, Shawn.

Private services have been held.
