
Richard Allan "Dick" MillsMills, Richard Allan

Richard Allan Mills (Dick Mills) died March 28, 2015 with his family by his side in Scottsdale, Arizona. Dick was born on January 29, 1945 in Boston, Massachusetts to Harvey and Barbara Mills. Dick played baseball on a full scholarship at Parson's College in Fairfield, Iowa and was drafted by the Boston Red Sox as a pitcher in 1966. He ended his professional baseball career in 1971, but lived his life with an extreme passion for baseball. Dick Mills was the founder of All About Pitching (pitching.com) and the co-author of the best-selling book, The Science and Art of Baseball Pitching. Through these two venues, Dick dedicated his life to coaching elementary, high school, and college age pitchers be the best they could be. Dick is survived by his wife Ginny Mills, son Ryan Mills, and his sister Patricia Mills Bradshaw. Donations can be made in the honor of Dick Mills to The All About Pitching Scholarship Fund. For information, please visit pitching.com

Published in The Arizona Republic on Apr. 12, 2015
