Frederick W. Schroeter '47, who was inducted into the Washington College Athletic Hall of Fame in 1985, passed away Saturday, December 13th, at the age of 91.

Schroeter had his college baseball career interrupted by World War II, during which served in the United States Marine Corps. He played shortstop on the 1942, 1943, 1946, and 1947 baseball teams. The Shoremen played against the University of Delaware for the Mason-Dixon Conference Championship his senior year.

Following graduation, Schroeter signed with the Brooklyn Dodgers' farm system, playing minor league baseball in Nashua, N.H., in the New England League and in Newport News, Va., in the Piedmont League. He went on to play several years in Baltimore-area semiprofessional leagues.
