Threats of labor trouble brought lower prices to the steel stocks, Wall Street seemed to take for granted the development of a bitter fight between employer and worker. week.

Utilities Strengthen

Utilities developed a fair show of strength, particularly those prefered stocks upon which there are substantial accumulations and upon which favorable earnings trend is beginning to make its presence felt. Rails were relatively quiet, but Wall Street found considerable satisfaction in the estimate of a 10.7 per cent increase in car loadings in the third quarter by the shippers boards.

In the face of the mixed character of the news, the market action of the main body of stocks was not disturbing. As a result of the latest tax legislation, higher dividends are expected to be paid during the latter part of the current year. This is a factor undoubtedly influencing investors and also a factor which makes for an extremely selective market.

Max A. Silver

Studies Styles At Fur Show n New York and other Eastern cities, Max A. Silver, manager of the Hudson Bay Fur Company, is back in Seattle after studying fashion creations of outstanding stylists of Paris, Hollywood and New York. He also attended the annual fur fashion show in the Wal-dorf-Astoria in New York, Mr. Silver has many interesting observations on the new fur style trends, and reports the swagger silhouette as the fur style for the forthcoming season. There are a number of variations of the swagger, notably in the slightly fitted front with the loose back. New features of the proposed reduction in rail freight rates took place. The new rates were scheduled to go into effect July 1, but the Interstate Commerce Commission suspended the tariff until January 1, pending investigation. this season's swagger styles_are found in shoulder, collar and sleeve treatments.

Gray and brown are the predominant colors, according to Mr. Silver, with gray even more imporing investigation.
