

Well-Known Minor Leaguer Succumbs TWO RIVERS (AP) - Albert W. Buege, 83, a native of Germany who became a well-known minor league baseball player, died Friday night at a local hospital. Buege, brought to this country when a child, became a star amateur pitcher in Milwaukee in the 1890's. Buege continued pitching for teams in the Fox River Valley. He was known especially for his remarkably slow curve, a difficult pitch for batters handle.

Albert Buege obit

Clipped By:

timcopeland Sun, Dec 17, 2017

