

SMILING JOHN CANTLEY DEAD

TYPHOID FEVER CLAIMS WELL KNOWN BALL PLAYER AT EVANSVILLE

It was announced in the Birmingham papers Monday that John Cantley had died of typhoid fever in Evansville, Ind., where he had been the leading pitcher in the Three-I League. Cantley got his start in organized baseball with Talladega in the 1913 season. He went from Talladega to Opelika, and later to Birmingham. He was owned by Birmingham this year and sent to Evansville for another season's seasoning before entering the Southern League. Cantley's home was in Ensley. He was very popular in the G.-A. L. and there will be general regret from fans and ball players alike that "Smiling John" is no

Cantley obit

Clipped By:

jackmo77 Sat, Apr 28, 2018

Newspapers™